ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A combination of dual mobile phone chargers has a housing and a plug removably received in the housing. The housing has a space defined in the housing to snugly yet securely receive therein the plug, a positioning cutout defined in a distal end of the housing and having first contacting plates formed on a bottom face defining the positioning cutout, a printed circuit board securely received in a bottom face defining the space and second contacting plates extending out of a side wall of the housing and engaging with the printed circuit board for connection with a wall outlet. The plug has a contacting point on a first distal end of the plug for connection with a power source, a locating cutout oppositely defined relative to the contacting point and third contacting plates formed on a bottom face defining the locating cutout.